

Cambridge Qualifications at Southland Girls' High School

Southland Girls' High School offers IGCSE (International General Certificate of Secondary Education) to our year 10 students.

This internationally recognised Cambridge University Exam is normally sat by Year 11 students, however we believe that by offering it at year 10 we are better preparing the girls to be able to achieve "excellence" at Level 1, 2 and 3 of NCEA.

Southland Girls' High School is also a recognised University of Cambridge Examination Centre. This means that International students who are older than 16 years, but who have taken similar Cambridge courses before, can in fact sit IGCSE at our school.

Southland Girls' High School is committed to students achieving excellence. As the only school south of Dunedin offering IGCSE, we think this clearly shows our drive for excellence, and to ensuring the girls have opportunities to excel in their learning beyond their chronological age.
